

WILSON REPLY TO POPE IS APPEAL TO GERMAN PEOPLE TO OVERTHROW MILITARISM

Washington Regards Note Rejecting Peace Proposals as Finally Settling Question of Dealing With Present Teuton Rulers; Lasting and Durable Peace Can Only be Negotiated on Complete Understanding With German People.

PRESIDENT SPOKESMAN FOR ALLIED NATIONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—President Wilson's note rejecting the Pope's peace proposal was regarded here today as finally settling the question of dealing with present German rulers unconquered or uncured at home. The President makes it clear that a lasting and durable peace can be negotiated only on a complete understanding with the German people and not alone on unstable guarantees of the existing government.

The note indicates that the American government does not intend post-bellum reprisals on the German people but desires in the interest of world peace that they be allowed to share in international economic opportunities "if they will accept equality and not seek domination."

The note with its unequivocal denunciation of German military autocracy is believed to reflect accurately the attitude of the Allied governments. The general tenor of the communication had been anticipated but diplomats were surprised to find in it a virtual appeal to the German people to strive for emancipation from military control and become fitted to deal with a world democracy.

The full text of President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict's peace proposals as submitted by Secretary of State Lansing follows:

"In acknowledgment of the communication of your holiness to the belligerent powers, dated August 1, 1917, the President of the United States requests them to transmit the following reply:

"Every heart that has not been blinded and hardened by this terrible war must be touched by this moving appeal of his holiness the Pope, must feel the dignity and force of the humane and generous motives which prompt it and must fervently wish that we might take the path of peace he so persuasively points out. But it would be folly to take it if it does not in fact lead to the goal he proposes. Our response must be based upon the stern facts and upon nothing else. This agony must not be gone through with again, and it must be a matter of very sober judgment what will insure us against it.

"His holiness in substance proposes that we return to the status quo ante bellum, and that there be a general condonation, disarmament and a concert of nations, based upon an acceptance of the principle of arbitration, that by a similar concert freedom of the seas be established, and that the territorial claims of France and Italy, the perplexing problems of the Balkan states and the restoration of Poland be left to such conciliatory adjustments as may be possible in the new temper of such a peace, due regard being paid to the aspirations of the people whose political fortunes and affiliations will be involved.

"It is manifest that no part of this program can be successfully carried out unless the restitution of the status quo ante bellum furnished a firm and satisfactory basis for it. The object of this war is to deliver the free peoples of the world from the menace and the actual power of a vast military establishment controlled by an irresponsible government which, having secretly planned to dominate the world, proceeded to carry the plan out without regard either to the sacred obligations of treaty or the long-established principles and long-cherished principles of international action and honor; which chose its own time for the war; delivered its blow fiercely and suddenly; stopped at no barrier either of law or of mercy; swept a whole continent within the tide of blood—not the blood of soldiers only, but the blood of innocent women and children also, and of the hapless poor; and now stands bailed, but not defeated, the enemy of four-fifths of the world. This power is not the German people. It is the ruthless master of the German people. It is no business of ours how that great people came under its control or submitted with temporary ease to the domination of its people; but it is our business to see to it that the history of the rest of the world is no longer left to its handling.

"To deal with such a power by way of peace upon the plan proposed by his holiness the Pope would, so far as we can see, involve a recuperation of its strength; and a renewal of its policy; would make it necessary to cease a permanent hostile combination of nations against the German people, who are its instruments, and would result in abandoning the newborn Russia to the intrigue, the machiavellian interference and the certain counter-revolution which would be attempted by all the malignant influences to which the German government has of late accustomed the world. Can peace be based upon a restitution of its power or upon any word of honor it could pledge in a spirit of settlement and accommo-

RUSSIAN DIVISION QUITS POSITION AND FLEES IN DISORDER

War Office Announces Rout of Force Near Fokshani, on Rumanian Front.

By Associated Press.
PETROGRAD, Aug. 29.—A Russian division yesterday abandoned its position in the region of Fokshani on the Rumanian front and fled in disorder, the war office announced.

The statement says that the enemy continued to advance all day yesterday on the Southern Rumanian front.

MOLDAVIA THREATENED WITH WALLACHIA'S FATE
While Russian leaders are debating at Moscow with divided opinions as to the best steps to take for saving the country from disaster within and without, the Russian armies continue to show perilous weakness at critical points. The latest break in the line through disaffection among the troops occurred on the Southern Rumanian front, where the Austro-German armies are menacing Moldavia with the fate of Wallachia, overrun in the great Teutonic-Bulgarian drive of last year.

In the Fokshani region, a Russian division abandoned its position and fled in disorder. This facilitated a Teutonic advance that continued all day yesterday.

Stormy weather apparently is preventing any notable military activities on the Franco-Belgian front.

British after completing their successful operation of Monday near Langemark, in which they pushed forward a considerable distance along a front of more than a mile, contacted themselves last night with clearing out a German advance position in front of the new British line. In other sectors, the British carried out successful raids.

Apparently there is also a halt in major activities along the French front in the Verdun region and in the campaign which General Cadorna is waging on the Isonzo front against the Austrians.

TRANSPORTATION IN RUSSIA MAY CEASE BY NOVEMBER

MOSCOW, Aug. 29.—At the third general sitting of the national conference, railway representatives reported that there existed a state of utter disorganization of transportation which, unless improved, would cease completely by November. The representatives are warning that the consequences would be terrible both at home and on the front, and that the army might turn on the country and commit unexampled excesses.

The extreme demands of the railway workers, the speakers said, played an important part in this disorganization. They called on all those engaged in transport services to sacrifice personal interests for those of the country.

ITALIAN AVIATOR SETS NEW DISTANCE RECORD

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Captain Giulio Laureani, an aviator in the Italian army, has established a new world's long distance flying record by flying more than 900 miles without stopping, according to a dispatch from the Temps from Milan. He flew from Turin to Naples and returned, a distance of 920 miles as the crow flies.

The previous long distance non-stop flight record was held by Second Lieutenant Antoine Marchal, a French aviator. In June, 1915, Marchal flew from Nancy, France, to near Chem, Russian Poland, in a Nieuport machine. The distance covered was about 897 miles.

BERLIN TORPEDO WORKS FOUNDRY BURNED DOWN

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 29.—The foundry of the Schwartzkopf torpedo works in Berlin was destroyed by fire on Sunday. Rumors of a considerable loss of life are current.

SERIOUS RIOTING BETWEEN FINNS AND RUSS SOLDIERS

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Serious rioting at Bjornborg, Finland, is reported in a private telegram from Haparanda to Copenhagen, forwarded by the Central News to London. It is said fighting between Finns and soldiers of the Russian garrison lasted for several hours and that a number of persons were killed or wounded.

BERLIN SAYS BRITISH ARE FAILING BACK IN FLANDERS

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—German counter attacks yesterday drove the British from the indentations they had made in the German line northeast of Frezenburg on the Flanders front, army headquarters announced today. In the Olluz valley on the Rumanian front, Teutonic forces stormed hill positions yesterday, says the announcement. More than 600 prisoners were taken.

ITALIANS ATTACKING POWERFUL AUSTRIO LINE

ROME, Aug. 29.—The Italian troops pushing forward on the Balasiza plateau have reached a powerful Austrian defense line and are now attacking it, the war office announced. On the heights beyond Gorizia, the Italians made gains.

DRAFTED MAN SAYS HE'LL DIE RATHER THAN SERVE IN WAR

Member of Religious Sect Opposed to Fighting Appeals to District Board.

Even if the penalty be death, a young man from Dickerson Run has written the appellate board of District No. 3, flatly refusing to serve in the army. His letter is as follows: "When reading over the enclosed affidavit, please keep it in mind that as a member of the International Bible Students Association, I intend to adhere strictly to the teachings of said association as explained in the enclosed affidavit. No matter if death be the result of it I will neither serve in the combative or non-combative forces."

LITTLE ACTIVITY AT DRAFT HEADQUARTERS

District No. 2 draft board will complete its work on exemption claims this afternoon, it is expected. The zone's quota will then have been filled, and the board's task completed with the exception of the mobilization of the drafted men to leave for the training camp at Petersburg, Va.

District No. 5 officials are still mailing out their notices to men drafted and exempted. Otherwise, they are through with their work. There is little activity in other draft headquarters but the small crowds of men gather around the certified list on the first floor of the Title & Trust building to find, as one expressed it, "is my name written there."

6TH BOARD HEADQUARTERS NOW AT THOMPSON NO 1

Headquarters of the Sixth Fayette selection board have been removed from the Republic high school building to the office of E. K. Seaman at Thompson No. 1. The change was made necessary because of the reopening of school next Monday morning.

CAPTAIN EDIE ASSIGNED TO PETERSBURG CAMP

Captain E. B. Edie of Connellsville, who has been in training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps, has been assigned Camp Lee at Petersburg, Va., in charge of Field Hospital Corps No. 21. Connellsville draft troops go to Fort Lee and it may be that Dr. Edie will have charge of a sanitary detachment for the regiment of which they form a part, though there is no means of knowing as yet.

Captain Edie's wife and mother, who spent a considerable period at Fort Oglethorpe, returned to Connellsville last night. On the train which carried Captain Edie to Petersburg, they report, were 400 members of sanitary corps. Captain Edie was in entire charge of the train.

J. B. KURTZ WILL HEAD LIST OF CANDIDATES ON PRIMARY BALLOT

Drawing to Determine Places on Ticket Held By County Commissioners.

Under the Clark act candidates for office in third class cities have their positions on the primary ballot determined by a drawing. This was conducted by the county commissioners today. The Connellsville candidates will appear as follows:

J. B. Kurtz,
John Duggan,
C. C. Mitchell,
COUNCIL.

Harry Hopkins,
L. L. West,
H. L. Berg,
Roy Hoover,
J. S. Madigan,
C. W. Ellis,

Daniel Simonds,
James C. Grossman,
M. B. Pryce,
George W. Eads,
George W. Campbell,
John J. Brady,
F. C. Conway.

There is only one candidate for Controller—J. C. Whiteley.

Business Block Burned,
ALTOONA, Aug. 29.—One of the principal stores of the business district of Altoona, Pa., was destroyed by fire of unknown origin early today. The loss is estimated as $20,000. The fire started in a millinery store.

TOBACCO FUND GROWING; 99 NEWSPAPERS, 92 MAGAZINES ENLISTED IN THE CAMPAIGN

Ninety-nine newspapers and 92 magazines are soliciting contributions to "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund." The Providence Journal raised $4,589.50 the second week of the campaign. So far $10,975.16 has been contributed.

It is a matter of local pride to make a big showing in the tobacco fund and for this reason The Courier asks its readers to send in their contributions now so that Connellsville may stand well in the next weekly statement.

The second week's report shows an increase of $5,294.73 since last week. A shipment has already gone to France and 29,000 packages will be sent next week.

A quarter buys 45 cents worth of assorted tobacco. A dollar buys $1.80 worth. In each 45-cent package is a postcard. The soldier who receives your package will mail the card to you with a message from the front. Send in a contribution today.

COMPANY D NOT TO LEAVE ON THURSDAY; TENTH DEPARTURE IS INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

Orders Received Yesterday to Start South Tomorrow Countermanded Today.

RAILROADS CAUSE DELAY

Company D will not leave tomorrow, as had been expected. The orders to go, received yesterday afternoon at about 3.30, were countermanded at 10 o'clock this morning. The postponement is for an indefinite period, and the troops will almost surely remain in Connellsville until after Labor Day. The change is made because of congestion in railroad circles. None of the Tenth will move Thursday, as had been ordered, and practically to other Pennsylvania troops will go South at that time. The countermanding order was sent to Lieutenant Colonel Henry W. Coulter of the Tenth by the War Department at Washington, and Captain Robert S. Morton received his orders from him.

Captain Morton yesterday afternoon received a telegram from Lieutenant Colonel Henry W. Coulter, in command of the Tenth, ordering a move on Thursday. Details, the telegram said, would be sent to follow. Captain Morton had already received the details of the route which he was to follow, and the only information required was the time of day when the command was to leave. The troops were notified of their coming departure, and the news quickly spread about town. Rumor had been persistent up to that time that the company would leave on Thursday, and for once rumor was verified.

The boys were glad to hear the news and all preparations for leaving were soon under way by the individual members of the company.

This morning some of the tents on the ground about the armory were taken down, and departure seemed sure. Then, at 10 o'clock, came the orders postponing movement of the troops.

Lieutenant Colonel Coulter had received a query Monday asking whether he could move the troops Thursday, and he replied that he could if they were furnished with cars. Yesterday morning an order was received directing him to move the regiment South Thursday. An order was also issued from Philadelphia for the Second Brigade, of which the Tenth is one regiment, to move to that city to reach Camp Hancock, September 1. The only reason given for the change in plans is the congestion of railroad traffic.

The boys are downcast this morning. They had been sure of leaving for camp and some had even packed their belongings. The rescinding of the order was a blow to them.

It now appears entirely likely that the first increment of drafted men will get away before Company D, although the date set for their movement, September 5, may also be moved back because of railroad congestion.

The cars on which Company D was to leave are said to have been going ready last night.

There was little activity this morning at the armory, with the exception of a short drill. No recruits have been received into the company.

NATIONAL SERVICE BOOKLETS NOW AT CARNEGIE LIBRARY

"The National Service Handbook" is a little book published by the Committee on Public Information, giving reliable information on all branches of national service, military and non-military.

Every American wishes to do his bit during the war and this handbook has been issued to point out the most useful avenues of service and at the same time to inform each member of the community of the varied tasks undertaken by the Army and Navy and in the air, behind the plow and at the machine, by banks and by railroads, by doctors, nurses and workers in the laboratories, by social workers everywhere.

Some of the subjects treated are domestic well-being, professional men and women, financing the war, industry, commerce and labor, agriculture and the food supply. Copies may be secured at the Carnegie Free Library.

BIG FRESHMAN CLASS

Ten From Sullivan District Will Enter Local High School.

This year's Freshman class at the high school is expected to be the largest class which has come in for years. The enrollment of first year pupils is likely to reach 160 or 165. Of these, about 120 are from the eighth grade, and 20 from the parochial school, the rest coming from out of town.

A particularly large delegation will come from the Smithton district, it is believed, about 10 having signified their intention of entering the local high school.

WESTON, W. Va., Aug. 28.—John Burroughs of Lewis county was arrested here today by United States Marshal Moore on the charge of evading the draft. He was taken to Clarksburg for a hearing.

GAS RATE RAISE COMPLAINT WILL BE DROPPED FOR YEAR

At End of 12 Months, Decision on Whether Advance is Justified Will Be Sought.

TRADES COUNCIL TO FIGHT

Superintendent J. E. Angle of Gas Company Indicates He Does Not Fear This Protest But Desires the Community Complaint Withdrawn.

City Solicitor E. C. Higbee and Councilman John Duggan last night agreed to let the objection to the raise in gas rates now before the Public Service Commission rest for one year, the Fayette County Gas company during this time agreeing to do everything possible to get new gas supply and furnish the fuel to manufacturers in this section. At the end of the year, the commission is to decide whether the increase is justified, and if it is found that the raise is excessive, consumers will be refunded all the extra money they have paid.

The agreement came after a long debate between Solicitor Higbee and Superintendent Angle of the gas company, at a special council meeting.

There is still a complaint of the trades and labor council filed against the gas rate raise which will likely be pushed. The company is willing to fight this protest to the end. It was the protest of the community, bearing the sanction of the city councilmen, that the company wanted withdrawn. The trades and labor council had no representatives at last night's meeting, thus signifying that they have no desire to do anything but fight the case out.

City Solicitor Higbee was unwilling to drop the objection altogether, as he said he did not know whether or not the increase was justified, and that was what he wanted to find out by a public service decision. Besides, he said, in making a protest later, the city would have to bear the burden, and it would cost at least $50,000 to prove that the gas raise was not justified. As it is now, the gas company will have to prove that the raise is justified.

"Well, is that all you want to do—save that money?" Mr. Angle asked. Mr. Higbee and Mr. Duggan answered in the affirmative after a little discussion, and the agreement was then reached to let the objection rest for a year.

The meeting was to have been for a discussion by council of Connellsville, Mount Pleasant councilmen, the trades and labor body, gas company officials, and manufacturers. All appeared except the union men.

Councilman L. L. West was absent because of illness, and Councilman J. H. Gwynn was in Brownsville. Mayor R. Marlette came in late. Councilman M. B. Pryce acted as chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Angle gave a short history of the Fayette County Gas company, showing how it has gradually become harder and harder to get gas. Getting down to the complaint before the Public Service Commission, Mr. Angle said that it had been a lot of work getting records ready to show that body, showing where the investment is, and how much it is. Expert engineers have been making up these records, he said, and their work will not be complete for three months.

"It is impossible for me or anyone else to answer questions about the financial condition of the company," he said. "The poor system of record keeping used by the Fayette Gas Fuel company, predecessor of the present company, is one reason why accurate valuation of investment is impossible."

In the condition which confronts us," Mr. Angle said, "there are four things which we can do. First, increase the production. Where could we drill the wells? The territory is practically all covered. However, we have leased ground from the Monongahela river to in back of Youngwood and hope to get a little gas there. But we can't make developments under the present price of gas. A moderate raise was decided on by the directors. Personally, I think they should have raised it more. Second, we could increase the pipe line capacity. This would be more expensive than drilling new wells, however. Third, we could put in a compressing station and draw the gas out of the wells not now furnishing much. This means money, probably a quarter million dollars. We can't do that and sell gas for 2 1/2 cents, even for 3 1/2 cents. Fourth, we can decrease the consumption."

The company can't do development work, Mr. Angle said, without money to do it with. The gas shortage, he said, is not a local condition. Mr. Angle spoke of the increase in the cost of everything connected with drilling, and asked for a square deal from the community. The advice to file a demurrer came from the company's attorney, he said, who had acted in a similar case in Kansas.

"We are making no threats," Mr. Angle said, "but we would like to feel assured. We would like to go ahead with development work, feeling free without this thing hanging over our heads. This is a serious problem and must be looked at from a serious viewpoint."

In a response to a question of Mr. Duggan as to who the Hope company, the Fayette County gas producer, is, Mr. Angle said it was considered a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company for a hearing.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

The monthly business and social meeting of the Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal church was held last evening at the home of Miss Helen and John Carroll in South Prospect street. Plans were discussed for a musicale to be held in the church Thursday evening, September 13, and for the annual old folks reception to be held Saturday, September 22. The plans of the reception will be the same as heretofore. Carriages or automobiles will be provided for the transportation of those who are unable to walk in and from the church, and the committee in charge will put forth every effort possible towards making the reception one of the largest and best ever held. A program will be rendered, and at its conclusion supper will be served. Arrangements were also made for an efficiency contest to begin September 9 and continue for six weeks. The object of the contest is to increase the efficiency of the league, which will be divided into two parts, known as the Reds and the Blues. Two captains, Miss Susan Hicks and Ralph Giger, were appointed. At the close of the contest a social will be held. Following the business meeting there was a social session. Refreshments were served.

NO CROP LOSS

Shortage of Labor Did Not Cause Any Waste of Crops, Is Claim.

At a conference yesterday in the office of the Fayette branch of the committee of public safety, here, E. E. Arnold, chairman of the food supply sub-committee and P. E. Dougherty, county farm agent, both stated that there has been absolutely no loss of crops in the county through a labor shortage. There has been some waste, they said, by careless farmers, but this was not at all due to the supply of labor running short. The conference was also attended by Benton Boyd, chairman of the committee on civilian service and labor. Plans were made for getting this sub-committee together in the office on Friday morning at 10:30 to determine what steps are to be taken toward helping in harvesting the corn crop. Reports from Mr. Dougherty and Mr. Arnold will show whether the farmers need or want help in harvesting this crop. If help is desired, the committee will take steps toward furnishing it.

everywhere see, if they never saw before, that no peace can rest securely upon political or economic restrictions meant to benefit some nations and cripple or embarrass others, upon vindictive action of any sort, or any kind of revenge or deliberate injury. The American people have suffered intolerable wrongs at the hands of the Imperial German government, but they desire no reprisal upon the German people, who have themselves suffered all things in this war, which they did not choose. They believe that peace should rest upon the rights of people, not the rights of governments—the rights of peoples, great or small, weak or powerful—their equal right to freedom and security and self-government and to a participation upon fair terms in the economic opportunities of the world—the German people, of course, included. If they will accept equality and not seek domination.

The test, therefore, of every plan of peace is this: Is it based upon the faith of all the peoples involved in merely upon the world of an ambitious and intriguing government, on the one hand and of a group of free peoples on the other? This is a test which goes to the root of the matter; and it is the test which must be applied.

The purposes of the United States in this war are known to the whole world—to every people to whom the truth has been permitted to come. They do not need to be stated again. We seek no material advantage of any kind. We believe that the intolerable wrongs done in this war, the furious and brutal power of the Imperial German government ought to be repaired, but not at the expense of the sovereignty of any people—rather a vindication of the sovereignty of those that are weak and those that are strong. Punitive damages, the dismemberment of empires, the establishment of selfish and exclusive economic leagues we deem inexpedient and in the end worse than futile, no proper basis for a peace of any kind. That must be based upon justice and fairness and the common rights of mankind.

"We cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany as a guarantee of anything that is to endure unless explicitly supported by such conclusive evidence of the will and purpose of the German people themselves as the other peoples of the world would be justified in accepting. Without such guarantees, treaties of settlement, agreements for disarmament, covenants to set up arbitration in the place of force, territorial adjustments, recognitions of small nations, if made with the German government, no man, no nation, could depend on. We must await some new evidence of the purposes of the great peoples of the Central Powers. God grant it may be given soon and in a way to restore the confidence of all peoples everywhere in the faith of nations and the possibility of a covenanted peace."

"ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State of the United States of America."

CONGRATULATE WILSON ON ANSWER TO POPE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Telegrams from all parts of the country began to pour into the White House today approving President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict's peace proposal.

RECEIVER FOR ORDER.

Royal Arcanum Again Alleged to Be Hopelessly Insolvent.

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—Arthur M. Cummings and James F. Upstone, both of Nassau, New Hampshire, today filed a bill in equity in the United States district court here, asking the appointment of a receiver for the Royal Arcanum, a fraternal insurance order, on the alleged grounds that its funds have been impaired by doubtful investments and the loss of a large number of members. The bill charges that the order has become hopelessly insolvent and that its resources are insufficient to meet its obligations.

This is the second receivership proceeding brought against the Royal Arcanum in recent months.

Lost Gem Found By Owner.

From Monday evening until this morning a diamond ring set worth $75 lay in the street at Cedar avenue and Race street, unnoticed and untouched. This morning it was found by its owner, Miss May Fox of Sycamore street, not far from the place it had dropped as Miss Fox alighted from the street car, and quite undamaged.

JOINT BIRTHDAY

Captain E. Dunn and Henry Kurtz, 77 and 76 Respectively.

Captain Edmund Dunn and Henry Kurtz, veterans of the Civil War, and two of the city's most prominent residents, are holding joint birthday celebrations this afternoon at the home of Captain Dunn at South Prospect street. The birthday of Miss Phoebe Dunn, a daughter of Captain Dunn, is also being celebrated. Miss Dunn's birthday does not come until Friday, but of late years it has been the custom for her and her father to celebrate the events together with a small family dinner.

There is just one year's difference in the ages of Captain Dunn and his comrade, Mr. Kurtz. The former is 77 years old, while the latter has reached the age of 76 years. Both are enjoying good health. Following the usual custom members of the William F. Kurtz Post No. 104 Grand Army of the Republic assembled at the Dunn home to assist in the celebration. Out of town guests are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Russell and sons Joseph and Frank of Warren, O.

Sons of Italy Meeting in State.

How Government Will Control The Supply and Price of Wheat

Food Administration Explains the Difficulties That Have Arisen and Makes Known Its Plans to Overcome Them.

Food Control Bill Does Not Fix Minimum Price For 1917 Crop, and This Must Be Kept Within Reason, to Curb Speculators.

THE food administration has announced its plans as to the control of wheat, flour and bread. The disturbance to the world's commerce and short supplies has caused a greater disruption of the normal markets for wheat than any other cereal.

First—As a result of the isolation of certain of the world's wheat producing countries by either belligerent lines or short shipping the normal determination of the price of wheat by the ebb and flow of commerce is totally destroyed.

Second—In order to control speculation and to secure more equitable distribution of the available wheat and flour between their countries the allied governments have placed the whole purchase of their supplies in the hands of one buyer. Also the European neutrals are now buying their wheat through single government agents instead of in the normal course of commerce.

Third—In normal times American wheat moves largely to Europe in the fall months. This year the shortage of shipping necessitates its distribution over the entire year. Therefore there is danger of a glut in our warehouse system over a considerable period.

Fourth—There are large stocks of wheat which cannot be drawn upon by the allies during the war, but in the event of peace or defeat of the submarines these would be available and might seriously demoralize the demand for American wheat.

Fifth—It must be clearly understood that the guaranteed minimum price of $2 per bushel for wheat, set out in the food bill, does not apply to the 1917 harvest, but only to the 1918 harvest, and then under conditions which must be elaborated. There is therefore no determined price for the 1917 harvest.

Must Regulate the Price. The result of this situation is that the normal price making machinery is entirely broken down unless some efficient government action is brought into play. Either (a) the American price may face a slump in wheat, possibly below its production cost, and (b) the export price of wheat, which ultimately determines the real price, is at the will of a single agency.

Some one must buy the surplus wheat at any given moment, and if the surplus passes into speculative hands it will be held for higher prices later in the year. (d) With stabilized prices, extra harvests introduced into all distribution links, which must be paid for by the consumer. It must be evident that the United States government can more justly deal with the situation than any of the agencies mentioned.

Therefore the food administration has determined to take the following course: First, in order to eliminate speculation in wheat and flour, all elevators and mills of over 100 barrels daily capacity will be required to take out a government license, the conditions of this license to be that only reasonable and customary charges shall be made for warehouse service, that no wheat shall be stored for more than thirty days without the approval of the food administration and that certain information as to receipts and shipments shall be supplied regularly. The grain exchanges are being asked to suspend all dealings and quotations in future wheat. These regulations will come into force Sept. 1.

While farmers' co-operative elevators are excepted by the food bill, this, however, applies only to mutual concerns and not to stock companies, and, in any event, under the advantages of joining the plan none are likely to stand out.

To Open Agencies at Terminals. In substitution of the broken down marketing machinery, the food administration proposes to open agencies for the purchase of all wheat at the principal terminals, carrying on its transactions with the usual dealers, and it is prepared to take the whole business necessary in order to maintain a fair price and will reach wheat for export in such quantities as we can afford to put with in protection of our own people, on one hand, and to sell, on the other, to the millers for domestic consumption. The administration will make no charge except a nominal per centage to cover costs of the operation, and arrangements will be made which will assure the government against loss.

In order that nothing shall be left to speculation we are setting up a properly constituted and independent auditing committee, which will check all transactions at every point. The food administration, under these arrangements, would have a large influence in fixing the price of wheat. With a view to determining a fair price, the president has approved the appointment of a committee to be selected from representatives of the producing sections and consuming elements of the nation. This committee will be assembled under the chairmanship of President Garfield of Williams college, and it will be the duty of this committee to determine a fair price for the 1917 harvest. Upon the determination of this fair basis it is the intention of the food administration to use every authority given it under the bill and the control of exports to effect the universality of this fair basis throughout the whole of the 1917 harvest year without change or fluctuation. It should thus be clear that it will not be to the advantage of any producer to hold back his grain in anticipation of further advance, for he will do so only at his own cost of storage and interest, and if it is necessary for the government to buy the entire wheat harvest in order to maintain this fair price in protection of the producer, the food administration intends to do so.

A Blow at Speculators. Furthermore, the holding of wheat or flour contracts by persons not engaged in the trade, and even when in trade, in larger quantities than are necessary for the ordinary course of their business is unlawful under the act, and such cases will be prosecuted with vigor. And such holders would be advised to liquidate their contracts at once.

"By the above arrangement we believe that we shall stabilize the price of wheat throughout the year, that the hazards of operation due to fluctuating prices which are imposed upon our willing and distributing community will be eliminated, and therefore their business can return to the normal lines and the normal margins of profit, and that we shall not only have stabilized the price of wheat, but stabilized the price of flour, and that it should enable us to arrive at a stabilized price of bread," says the board.

The food administration has had the patriotic co-operation of the leading millers of the country, and these millers have organized at the request of the food administration a committee to represent the entire trade. Detailed proposals for an agreed differential of profit and expenses per barrel of flour and per ton of food are under discussion. Under this arrangement the public will be assured an equitable and stabilized price of flour based upon the cost of raw material, and we confidently expect the volunteer arrangement with the mills which will give satisfaction to the public.

The universal endeavor over the country to reduce consumption of wheat breadstuffs, in order that we may have the requisite exports with which to carry the allies over the forthcoming winter, will result in a largely increased amount of wheat available for export. If it were exported as wheat it would result in diminution of employment in our mills and, of equal importance, curtailment of supply of mill feed for our dairy cattle. Therefore the food administration will stipulate for a large proportion of export of flour instead of wheat, and as the export orders for flour will be given subject to the approval of the food administration those which co-operate with the food administration will be given the benefit of the exports employment. By thus encouraging the home production of flour the manufacturing cost will be reduced, and therefore the American public will receive indirect benefit in lowered margins of cost in distribution.

In accordance with the policy of the administration to co-operate with all trades, it is also discussing details of voluntary arrangements with the flour distributors by which agreed differentials may be effected in the wholesale trade.

Investigate Cost of Baking. An exhaustive investigation is being made into the cost of baking and bread distribution, and active discussions are being carried on with the bakers' war emergency committee as to plans for the elimination of waste in the industry and the production of a standard loaf.

It is impossible to anticipate the price to be enacted by the "fair price committee," under Dr. Garfield, and it will probably require two or three weeks in its determination. The basis of determination will be to arrive at a price which represents a fair return to the producer for his patriotic endeavor to increase the supply and a proper reduction of the cost of flour to the consumer.

It must be evident to all thinking persons that unless the price of wheat, flour and bread can be materially reduced we cannot expect to maintain the present wage scale of the country and that we must in this social readjustment lose efficiency at a time when we can afford no such sacrifice.

Chinese Sausages. In China sausages are made of meat from the hind thighs of hogs, which are chopped fine, mixed with four drams of sugar, rice wine and table salt, eight drams of soy and a pinch of pepper to every one and one-half pounds and dried in the sun until ready for tinning. Dried oysters and quick livers are added to some varieties.

It Would Help. "My dear, we can't afford to pay $50 a month rent." "Of course we can't, my dear. I've thought of that. But there's a lovely garage on the back of the lot which we can surely rent for $5 a month, which will help a good deal."—Detroit Free Press.

Presumption Resented. "Be good," said the philosopher, "and you will be happy." "Not necessarily," replied the man of sensitive conscience. "If you undertake to be good some envious people are likely to think you are trying to put on airs."—Washington Star.

The Rivalry. "I have just been readin' goth Hamlet Patti, 'some startlin' statistics about the earth's capacity.'" "Why need you worry about the earth's capacity?" responded Yorkie Hamm. "You'll never play to it."—Pittsburgh Post.

The only thing you can afford not to say is a grudge.

"CLOWN ALLEY"

That's Where Chalk Paint and Web-Toed Shoes Hold Forth.

Where chalk-white paint and rouge and huge web-toed shoes hold forth in the circus, there is clown "alley." There is where one will find "the joys," as the people of the "white tops" term the clowns. And in the clown alley of the Sells-Floto Circus, coming to Connelville to exhibit Friday, August 31, one will find well known tumblers, men who produce and stage the skits in the three rings, on the stages and in the circling hippodrome track, to say nothing of the mimic warfare with comedy cannon in comedy Zeppelins high up under the dome of the big top.

Take men like Horace Webb and William De Leroy, for instance. They carry their own companies of clowns. They conceive, write, stage and rehearse their big set acts almost as carefully as a dramatic impresario shapes a Broadway farce. These men are known in spangled as producing clowns, and the don't grow on trees; for there are few producing clowns who can design pantomimic acts that will register in an immense "auditorium" enclosed by a tent seating over 34,000 people.

There are nearly 50 clowns with the Sells-Floto Circus, and eight of them are producing clowns. Mr. De Leroy is also a musical director and his clown band, which appears in the parade and the big show, is an organization of clever musicians. It is sometimes startling to hear this band switch from laughter provoking records in a flawless rendition of a beautiful piece of music. In the parade, this band—one of five excellent aggregations of soloists in the million dollar open air review—is mounted on burros. It is one of the scores of pleasing novelties in the pageant. Two of the other bands are mounted, but they ride thoroughbred horses.

TESTIMONIALS FOR MEDICINES

Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company Publishes Only Genuine Ones.

The testimonials published by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company come uncollected. Before they are used the Company takes great care to inform itself about the writer. Never knowingly, has it published an untruthful letter, never is a letter published without written consent signed by the writer.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness. It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; and their kind desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

HOUSTON SHOOTINGS RAISE THE QUESTION OF KEEPING NEGRO SOLDIERS IN SOUTH

Four of the more prominent figures in the Houston (Tex.) shooting scene, in which troops of the Twenty-fourth United States Infantry shot up the city, are shown here. The soldiers accused are negroes, and the affair has caused a tremendous sensation, 17 persons being killed and more than a score wounded. No. 1 is Governor Ferguson of Texas, who has declared the city and county under martial law; No. 2 is Senator Sheppard of Texas, who wants the government to withdraw all negro troops from Texas; No. 3 is General James H. Parker, in command of the southern department; No. 4 is General George Bell, Jr., who assumed charge of the situation in Houston.

Catholics Acclaim Pope's Proposal, But Don't Ask U. S. to Accept It. By Associated Press. KANSAS CITY, MO., Aug. 29.—Resolutions "acclaiming" the peace proposal of Pope Benedict, and pledging all Catholics of this country to the war program of the United States, but containing no clause urging acceptance by the American government of the Pope's suggestion, were reported favorably here today by the resolutions committee of the American Federation of Catholic Societies. They will be presented to the convention now in session here later in the day with the belief of leaders that they will be adopted.

TOMORROW'S DUTY.

If you go to the polling places tomorrow to register for the coming election and do not take your tax receipt, you will be obliged to return for it or delay registration until the next day fixed for that purpose, which is Tuesday, September 4.

If you forget this necessary precaution tomorrow you are just as likely to also forget it on the second registration day and you will be obliged to delay it again and take the chance of overlooking it on the third and last registration day, which is Saturday, September 15.

Better attend to this duty tomorrow and be done with it.

POSITIVE PERFORMANCE; NOT NEGATIVE PROMISE.

In the advocacy of the election of a man to office no one is more deluded by the "one term" argument of "one term only" than those who use it. It is based upon the assumption that the voters do not have the wit to see that it is intended solely as a bait to catch them or that they do not analyze for themselves the motives of those who are driven to the necessity of making the best of a very poor argument. The day when voters are so easily fooled has long since passed, and those persons who would so fool them are passing, too.

When there is advanced in support of a candidate the single contention that his opponent should be defeated because, through demonstrated fitness in the discharge of his official duties, he has won the confidence of the voters and the public to the extent that he is urged to stand for re-election, attention is at once directed to both the weakness and the paucity of the "one term" argument. Such arguments, if by courtesy they are dignified by that term, so palpably evade the issue of comparative experience and qualification, which are the supreme tests of any candidate's claim to support, that they embarrass and weaken instead of encourage and strengthen those in whose favor they are advanced.

To such an extent has the voting public appraised the true value and effect of the "one term" plea, that few candidates are willing to announce upon such a platform, and that the office to a candidate seeking an office to thus handicap him. Whatever may have been his previous training and experience in the line of preparation for the office to which he aspires it is doubly discounted, in the public's estimation, when the promise is made, either express or implied, by the candidate himself or those who speak for him, that he will be satisfied with but a single term.

There was a period in the history of politics when the term "turn" was sort of a fetish among voters, but that was in the dark ages of partisanship when voters were susceptible to all the sophistries and blatherings of candidates and party leaders and when they dared not disregard admonitions to party fealty. In these enlightened days when voters can no longer be hoodwinked by false prophets or foolish advisers, and when they have attained an independence of thought, judgment and voting which in earlier times would have been adjudged open rebellion, they have come to measure men for office by the standards by which they determine the efficiency and value of a man in their shop, office or field.

In either case they are little concerned about what the candidate or man will promise not to do at some remote period; but they are very much concerned in knowing what he has done that will qualify him to fill the office or to do the work now. And this, in the concrete, Fayette county voters have in the present judicial campaign.

CAN MEN BE DRAFTED INTO MINING?

In the event that the government finds it necessary or desirable in its coal price regulation plan, to take over the coal mines under the power conferred by the Lever Food Control bill, an interesting problem will be raised as to the status to be given the men employed in the industry.

The Selective Service Act gives the President authority to draft for industrial service only from those persons who are liable to be drafted for military service. Such persons constitute only a portion of the working forces of the mines, hence in case of conscription by the government it would be very much restricted in the sources from which it could requisition men in the event that the mine employees as a class, or in considerable numbers, were disinclined, for any reason, to continue the production of coal under the government control.

As much as the draft for both

Re-Election Is Important

JUDGE J. Q. VAN SWEARINGEN

Re-election of Judge Van Swearingen at the non-partisan primaries on September 19 is of greatest importance to the people of Fayette county.

On account of the unsettled condition of the country caused by the war there is a great amount of litigation coming into the Common Pleas courts of this county of a more diversified character than ever before. At the close of the war it has been predicted that there will be a period of unrest during which the readjustment of the affairs of this country will take place.

The Common Pleas bench of Fayette county must be composed of men of experience, judicial temperament and wisdom to meet the new conditions. Just what the new conditions will bring forth no one is able to tell, but to meet the litigation which is certain to grow out of them, a cool, fearless judge, learned in the law and intimately acquainted with conditions, should preside over our courts.

Judge Van Swearingen is admirably fitted to preside over the courts of Fayette county under any condition and in any emergency. He has kept abreast of the times in his study of the law and of the industrial and business conditions which constantly are arising. During his tenure of office he has demonstrated that he has the poise and temperament of a great jurist.

Re-election of Judge Van Swearingen is for the best interests of the people of Fayette county.

military and industrial service is limited to men between 21 and 31 years of age, there is as plainly an absence of power under the Selective Service Act to compel men of other ages to perform service as soldiers, as there is absence of power to compel men of other than those of the draft age to work in the mines.

It is altogether unlikely that there would be refusal upon the part of the miners to work under government control of the mines, but there is the possibility that provisions other than those now in force may be necessary to make the Selective Service Act apply to men in industrial service whose ages are under or over those fixed by the act.

TAKING DANIELS' MEASURE.

From the statement of the Navy League's side of the controversy with Secretary Daniels the public has a clearer conception of what the order issued by the latter means as well as giving a more exact measure of the man who issued it. By refusing to permit the admission "to any naval station, naval reservation or ship," of the officers of the Navy League, and refusing to "permit the acceptance of anything whatever from the organization," Secretary Daniels has gone the extreme limit of petty spitefulness in an angry effort to "get even" with the League for alleged "slandering" and false statements made by the League in connection with an investigation of the explosion in the Mare Island navy yard.

In thus venting his spleen upon an agency or group of persons who date call attention to the delinquencies of his department Secretary Daniels has gone so far beyond the bounds of discretion that Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the Navy League, charitably declares that "clearly Secretary Daniels does not mean what he says."

"He cannot mean," Colonel Thompson continues, "that if Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Darlington, Bishop Donahue or Bishop McCormick be called upon to perform the sacred offices of their church at a naval station or on board a man-of-war, that they would be denied the privilege. He cannot mean that if ex-President Roosevelt wished to pay a visit of courtesy to a naval station or a man-of-war, he should be turned back; or that if the professional services of Judge Alton B. Parker were required to defend an officer or man at a court martial, he could not serve. He cannot mean that if Mrs. Dewey, president of the woman's branch of the Navy League, wished to visit one of the ships which helped to make her husband famous, she would be refused admission. He may mean that I am to be denied the privilege of attending, next June, the fiftieth anniversary of my graduating at the Naval Academy, but I hereby serve notice on him that I will attend."

The pique shown by the irascible secretary over the recent incident is not the first or only instance of his blunt refusal to accept the services of the patriotic men and women of the Navy League to provide for the comfort and welfare of the men who are upholding the honor of our country on the seas.

"When we offered to provide a committee and funds to look after the dependent families of the men who were enlisted in the Navy," says Colonel Thompson, "Secretary Daniels refused us the opportunity. When we offered to donate $50,000.00 of insurance to the men of the navy, without cost to them, he refused to permit them to accept it."

And yet the Administration intrusts to a man of such narrowness, prejudice and demonstrated unfriendliness the important task of directing the operations of the Navy in the greatest war of modern times!

Hoover Making Good.

Mr. Hoover is certainly making good. He hasn't been food dictator for more than a couple of weeks and pork chops are already 50 cents a pound, butter 50 cents and everything else in proportion. He is surely on the job.

Fraternity, the Golden Mean.

The Christian Herald.

Singleness and greed are to be abhorred. They are at the one extreme, while greediness and carelessness are at the other. The golden mean of working thrift is to be found half-way between.

Through Him we learned the ways of God and found the Father's love. The Son it was who won us back to Him who reigns above.

The Lord did not come down himself to prove to men His worth. He sought our worship through the child He placed upon the earth.

How can I best express my love? Wherein does greatness lie? How can I long remembrance win, since my boy shall die?

Both fame and gold are selfish things, their charms may quickly flee. But I'm the father of a boy who long may speak for me.

In him I see all I hope to be; his splendor shall be mine. I shall have done man's greatest work if only he is true.

If some day he shall help the world long after I am dead, In all that men shall say of him my prayer shall be said.

It matters not what I may win of floating gold or fame, My hope of joy depends alone on what my boy shall claim.

My story must be told through him, for him I work and plan, For his greatest duty is to be the father of a man.

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason.

SMALL SOLDIERS.

Small boys have quit their playing, their sliding on the hill, and now they are playing great military drill. All around me I behold them, in marches and parades; small generals enrolled them in legions. They are armed with valor Roman, their rifles made of boards, and bravely charge the foe with little wooden swords. No hideous war, no ghastly scenes are played upon the lawn. The boys who would be plotters, and make baseball a trade, are busy now as ditchers, for trenches must be made. They toil with wooden shovels, no soldier loafs or stails, the boys from humble hovels, the boys from stately halls, there is no weary clatter for peace with shameful joys, there is no whining slacker among the little boys. No kid so keen for peace as this, he would dodge the fray because he buys three nines and sundry uncles say, The kids, so small their mothers put them to bed at night, are slacking older brothers who fear to go and fight.

Bathers Aiding the Enemy.

Ever Notice Our Busy Grocery Stores

Did you ever stop to think what made our grocery stores such active busy places? No doubt you have often thought about it, and a better guess is you know why they are busy. The real reason that our grocery stores are so busy, and the real reason you notice it, is because we have the finest and most complete line of fresh goods the market produces and we are selling them at very reasonable and popular prices. Your attention is called to our extensive line of breakfast foods—about ten different varieties; our extensive line of cakes and crackers, both coming in fresh every day. We want to remind you of our elegant stock and brands of coffee and tea; all sorts of canned goods; a wonderful variety of fresh fruits received daily and often sold out without any profit at all. It is a line of goods we do not expect to make money on—they are carried for the convenience and accommodation of our customers. Go through our grocery stores entirely—take up every item of package goods or loose goods and compare our prices with any opposition in Fayette or Westmoreland counties, or any other sections in which we operate, and in every instance you will admit that our prices are lowest and our goods high class. Drop into the meat market connected with the grocery. The sanitary condition under which they are operated assures you of high quality meats, and the reputation of our concern assures you reasonable and fair prices.

The Proof in Sales!

The proof of the newspaper advertising pudding is not so much in the eating as in the delightful after effects.

To illustrate: A large Philadelphia manufacturer had used other media, and it was only after much persuasion he was induced to try newspapers.

After one year's experiment his sales manager wrote the BUREAU OF ADVERTISING:

"Results have been so encouraging as to sell our company a national campaign of advertising through the newspapers."

When all is said and done it is results that count. And newspaper advertising gives results.

The BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, American Newspaper Publishers Association, 806 World Bldg., New York City, will be glad to present facts to manufacturers and distributors on the use of newspaper advertising.

MUCH MORE WHEAT TO BE PLANTED IN COUNTY THIS YEAR

County Farmers Alive to Fact That $2 Price Means Good Profits.

GOOD SEED IS BADLY NEEDED

Ande From Planting Additional Acreage Farmer's Aim Will Be to Get As Big Yield as Possible From An Acre; Farm Bureau to Assist.

With a minimum price of $2.00 per bushel for 1918 wheat and the call
"MORE BREAD" sounding, farmers in Fayette County will sow just as many acres to wheat this fall, as land
and labor will allow.

Because of the increased price,
yields. Why have a yield of 15 bushels per acre when a neighbor has 25 or 30 bushels? asks the farmer. "If you study his system you will probably find he is giving attention to seed,
preparation of soil and fertilization,"
says a Fayette County Farm Bureau Bulletin.

"Preparation of seed bed means plow early and deep and harrow often. By practicing this system the seed bed will be firm and full of moisture at seeding time.

"Better Seed Wheat means with wheat at least that $2.00 per bushel, he cannot afford to sow rye, barley, chest, cockle and wheat in the same field. Each day the Farm Bureau is being asked, "Where can I get good clean seed wheat?" We are looking up clean seed for every farmer. There are men growing good seed in the county who have wind mills or will purchase them, and clean their entire crop for seed. If you want to know where to get good seed, write or call the Fayette County Farm Bureau as soon as possible.

We will have names of farmers with first class seed, with a record of his price per bushel, variety, etc.
"Fertilizer-Manure and Acid Phosphate make a good combination.
Where no manure can be applied deferring seeding a light top-dressing of manure during the winter will give very satisfactory results, especially on fields which receive very little protection by snow. Barnyard manure should be supplemented with from 250 to 350 pounds acid phosphate per acre.

"Two hundred and twenty-five pounds of 16% acid phosphate on a rye field in Lower Tyrone township gave an increased yield of 15 bushels of rye last year. One should be able to purchase 14% acid phosphate in ten lots at a price of about $22.00 and the 16% variety at about $34.00. If your local dealer does not handle it,
we can tell you where you can get it
in ton or car lots.

"You should make arrangements
for your fertilizer immediately, as a delay may mean that you will not be able to purchase it.

TO MARKET FRUIT.

State Bureau Will Assist Dealers in Adams and Franklin Counties,
By Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 29.—The newly created state bureau of markets of the Department of Agriculture has undertaken as a war measure to market 100 carloads, 32,000 bushels, of peaches from the Adams and Franklin county fruit belt.

A number of the dealers have decided to sell their crops through the bureau which is ready to submit prices and shipping arrangements.

Mount Pleasant

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 29.—The Tenth Regiment band came to Mount Pleasant last evening on a special car at 6:20 o'clock. With Company E, it marched down Main street in the rain, making an excellent showing.
Despite the fact that it was raining the streets were lined on both sides with people to cheer the boys and wish them good luck. After the parade the band gave a concert in the armory, which was packed to the very doors. The program delighted the audience, especially the singing.

Non Support Charged.
John Grouch, charged with non-
support and desertion, was arrested,
taken before Justice of the Peace L. S.
Rhodes and held for court. Grouch refused to have much to say concerning his family affairs and Constable Mc-Collough took him to the county jail
to await a hearing at court.

Charges Watch Theft.
Steve Farnia had Frank Powlak arrested, charged with stealing a watch.
William McClain arrested Powlak and brought him before Justice of the Peace J. R. Walker where the case was settled by the defendant paying the cost.

pany. That was Mr. Duggan's cue for a speech about the increase already contributing to the support of the Standard Oil company. "It may be well for us," Mr. Angle said, "that we have this slight connection with the Standard Oil for they have lots of money to develop with."

"Do the Hope company owners also own the stock of the Fayette County Gas company?" Mr. Higbee asked.
"Not a share," was the reply. "There is no connection between the two companies. We are absolutely independent. With the Standard Oil we have a slight connection, because the corporation and the Fayette company took over a plant in Huntington between them."

"What assurance will you give that if the complaints are withdrawn, the company will supply manufacturers with gas?" Mr. Higbee asked.

"What assurance will you give that
the complaints will be withdrawn?"
Mr. Angle wanted to know.

"None. I don't think they will be."
"Then, what's the use of arguing the case here, then, if that's the spirit
it came to this meeting?"

Mr. Higbee said he was referring to the labor council's complaint, over which he had no control. "Oh," said
Mr. Angle, "I don't consider the second complaint. It's the first, the community complaint that I want withdrawn."

Mr. Higbee made the proposition that if he and H. C. Keiser, treasurer of the company, were allowed to work together on the books for two or three days, he would determine whether the complaints were reasonable and necessary, and if so,
cease to object.

It was made clear that in any case
the gas company could not furnish gas to manufacturers for more than a year, unless an unexpected supply is struck. In that case, the manufacturers would be supplied, the gas not being conserved for domestic consumers. Only a year of grace is given to manufacturers, however, and they must take that time to convert their machinery for the use of other fuel.

One of Mr. Higbee's objections was that the Hope company was getting a two and a half cent increase as well as the Fayette. "If you've made a bad contract by which they get 50 per cent of a raise," he told Mr.
Angle, "you ought to suffer for it,
and not shunt your mistake on to the public. If you're entitled to any raise it ought to be two and half cents,
not five."

"Besides, you went about it wrong," he said. "Instead of coming to council and telling what you wanted, you embarked in a campaign of expensive
advertising which did more to quash your case than anything else. The arguments were not pertinent to the case." Mr. Higbee had previously referred to the advertisements as "filthy stuff."

E. W. Hickman of the Richmond
Radiator company, Uniontown, explained how the gas company was running on bluff. H. D. Hutchison, a driller of wells, testified along the same lines. W. L. Graham of the Masonville Glass company declared that the public should accept the slight advance gracefully; if by so doing the gas company would be put in a position to give manufacturers gas during the coming year. The increase to the county domestic consumers would amount to about $50, 000 a year. The Masonville Glass company alone has a payroll of $150,
000 a year. "The people are the losers,"
Mr. Graham said, "if you continue with this objection. A year to get a gas producer installed looks mighty good to us."

E. B. Swartz with B. B. Cold-
smith, represented Mount Pleasant,
said, "we'd like to keep our plants going. Mount Pleasant would feel their loss."

You Can Tell the People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron will Make Nervous, Run-down People
100% Strong in Two Weeks' Time
In Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European medical institutions in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the waning class. Sleepless nights, most worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit forming drugs
and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without the blood has no power to change
food into living tissue and therefore,
nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down
people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other trouble in from 10 to 14 days, and simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take one or two tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and send healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like Nuxated Iron. If you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron preparations it is easily assimilated, does not tarnish the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 50 who lacks iron and double and even triple their strength over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in 10 days' time. It is dispensed in this city by A. A. Clarke

ness of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Stuck, who is threatened with typhoid fever.

Squire J. C. High in the unavoidable absence of H. O'Neil, presided in Squire O'Neil's court and heard and disposed of a case for his Saturday evening. The case grew out of a practical joke perpetrated by Robert Clark, a 12 year old boy, the victim
being a colored man, Sylvester Stone.

The boy said in his information that the colored man struck him with a shovel, showing a cut on the side of his face, a result of the lick, and the only provocation the colored man had was that the boy had placed a dead snake in the pile of coal from which the defendant was shoveling coal. The case was compromised by the defendant paying the costs.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE FOOD GAMBLERS"—One of the most timely screen dramas of the moment is being presented today.
The picture is one of the newest Triangle productions, featuring William Lucas and Eida Miller. Miss Miller appears as a young newspaperwoman, who exposes a ring of prominent men engaged in "food gambling."

The picture is said to be alive with action. The young reporter, who is aided by the food commissioners,
breaks into the food gamblers' office
and declares she will imprison them as traitors to their community. Miss Miller is given an excellent opportunity to display her newspaper instinct for the play is one long chain of exciting events. In which the alert young woman plays an important part. The newspaper office shown in the picture is no product of a director's imagination or a stage carpenter's manufacture. It is the actual office of The New York Globe. One of the best parts in the production is that taken by Mae N. Barnes the 280 pound police inspector in the play. Tomorrow, Marguerite Clark will appear in "Snow White," a five part Paramount attraction of unusual interest.

THE SOISJON.

The efficiency of a theatrical booking office was demonstrated this week
when, after a musical tabloid company was closed on Monday night because it was below the Soisjion standard, a complete change of the program was made together in Pittsburgh and sent to Connelville in time for the afternoon performance. The bill was good, too, though perhaps not the peer
of other programs presented recently.
There is something in it, however, that should please all patrons of the house.

That the people of Connelville and vicinity have confidence in the Soisjion
management to present good shows
and to make good for any slip-ups,
such as that of Monday, was evidenced by the large crowds last night.

The bill includes a cracklerjack acrobatic act, which may be retained for the entire week, a fine accordionist,
a colored singing team that scores heavily, a monologist and dancer and a song, dance and athletic pair who are very clever.

Stigrore is the film attraction for today. Thursday a change of program.

depends mainly for its laughs upon the creation of gross and low comic tritunings. The chorus will wear French doll dresses of blue silk, Fay Tinsler stripes and Panchon purple sarabandas.

The musical numbers are part of original script with but three excep-

FIGHT FOR YOUR LIFE

Duty Demands
Robust Health
Fight to get it and keep it

Fight—fight day in and day out to prevent being overtaken by ill and dile. Keep wrinkles from marring the cheek and the body from losing its youthful appearance and buoyancy.
Fight when ill-health is coming with its pallor and pulse, defects and declining powers. Fight to stay his course and drive it off.
But fight intelligently. Don't fight without weapons that can win the day
for without the intelligent use of effective weapons the pallor spreads and weakness grows and a seemingly strong man or woman oftentimes becomes a prey to ill health.
You will not find this class of persons in the hypochondria ranks. No unhealthy, dull, draggy, drooping persons in the line. It is a clean, healthy, refreshing aggregation of quick-witted
view life in a joyous frame of mind and are mentally and physically able to any emergency. Hypochondria stands for weak body and sound mind—it is the invigorating tonic of the times
—powerful and unsurpassed as a health
restorer, vitalizer and health preserver.
Fight to hold the vigor of a sound body with hypochondria at bay, stay the process of decay and restore health and strength—you win. This tonic of amazing, wonder-working properties
has been approved by physicians as a restorer and safeguard of health.
It is a thoroughly scientific preparation of the very elements necessary to tone up the stomach and nerves, to build strong, vital tissues, make pure blood, firm flesh and self, active, tireless muscles.
Hypochondria contains those mighty strength-producing agents, iron and iron phosphate, in a form best adapted to benefit the body and its organs. Its ingredients are absolutely necessary to the body. In nine cases out of ten a rundown condition, all the common complaints that "all in" feeling and frail bodies are due to lack of healthy and resting hypochondria.
Your mental and physical strength and endurance depend upon the amount of iron phosphate laden blood, steady, disposable nerves and a healthy stomach.
With these you can meet life at any stage.
Wonder tonic, hypochondria, which is
as perfect an science can get to nature,
meets every demand of the human organism. It is safe and sure and a tonic to run-down, worn-out men and women. It gives you the power of your own way of bringing color to the cheeks, vigor and buoyancy to the body and delight in the way of effecting beauty is not need by hypochondria. It is the gold standard of health. It is the glow of health to the cheeks.
No need of going through life sickly and always feeling miserable in this age of medical science. Join the hypochondria rank. It puts into you the spring and vigor you ought to have and puts life into your body and mind that implies
the confidence that you confront the world on an equal footing with anyone.
Hypochondria may be had at all drugstores or direct from our list for $1.00 per packet. It will worth the price.

VETERAN PLANK
QUITS DIAMONDGreat Southpaw Bows Before
Old Father Time.

HAS LOST EFFECTIVENESS

Retired to Pitch in College, and Coach
Saw That He Was a Wonder—Connie
Mack Was Tipped Off and Signed
Him in 1901—Was Greatest Southpaw of His Time.

Edward S. Plank, known throughout the baseball world as the greatest southpaw pitcher of his time, has bid the game farewell.

Fielder Jones of the St. Louis Browns made the announcement. Plank has been in the big leagues for twenty years, and during that time compiled the most remarkable record ever made by a left hand pitcher.

According to Manager Jones, the veteran pitcher is in earnest in his retirement this time. For years Plank has contemplated laying aside his uniform and glove, but time and again was persuaded by managers with big offers to remain in the big show.

Old Father Time, however, has in recent years made it evident to even the marvelous Plank that his skill was on the wane. He has steadily been losing his effectiveness on the mound, and about a month ago made it known that he would not remain in the game much longer.

Born in Pennsylvania, Plank was born in Gettysburg, Pa., in 1875. Unlike the average American youth, however, he did not begin to play ball in early boyhood. Until he was fifteen years of age he had never seen a baseball score. At sixteen he handled his first ball and bat, and not until a year later did he attempt to pitch a game.

When Plank was twenty-two he went to college at Gettysburg. The coach at the institution that Plank entered was Frank Foreman, the famous pitcher of the old Baltimore Orioles.

Foreman usually looked over the candidates for the nine when they reported for practice and asked the men what positions they were accustomed to play. Plank had never even seen a uniform, for his teammates usually played in their farm clothes. When Eddie was asked where he fitted in, he modestly replied that he "had pitched some down home."

It did not take the old coach long to discover that he had a recruit of unusual talent in Plank. One day he took the lad aside and said:

"If you follow my instructions closely I'll make you one of the greatest southpaws in the country."

Plank worked no further inspiration. He worked long and hard, mastering control and defeated nearly every team he faced on the college diamond. One of Foreman's friends was Connie Mack, manager of the Senators and he tipped off Mack that he had a phenom.

When his first league game. The Athletics' manager immediately trotted into communication with Plank and signed him to a contract. That was in 1901. Since that time Plank has been in the major leagues. The day after he joined the Mackmen he was pitched against the famous Vin Morero of the Senators and beat him 6 to 4. It was the great Mathewson. Plank won the act of conserving his strength and thereby added years to

BYRON INTERPRETS A RULE.

Says Runner to First Has Right to Retreat Back Beyond the Plate.

In one of the Brooklyn games in Pittsburgh a Superba runner was on first base when the batsman drove a ball to Hans Wagner, slowly, straight on the first baseline. Hans came tearing in and picked up the ball a few feet ahead of the batter, who thereupon turned and went back toward the plate. That disconnected Homer, who chased the batter and tagged him, the man on first getting to second.

The runner going to first has a perfect right to pull up and go back toward the plate, and it will almost invariably disconcert the first sacker, as it did Wagner. It bothers the first baseman if he is too far to touch the bag immediately and prevents a throw for a double play after retreating the batter.

KID MCCOY IN THE WAR.

Soldier of Fortune Has Had a Most Varied Career.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago there was a small newsboy running large on a section of Illinois street, Indianapolis, known then as the "Jeeve." His name was Norman Selby until he branched out into the fight game, after which he was known all over the world as Kid McCoy.

Few dispute the assertion that McCoy was the greatest fighter of his weight in the history of the prize ring. He won fortunes and championships and threw both away time and again in America, Europe and South Africa. As a soldier of fortune it might be said that he has been married and divorced six times, served in the Spanish-American war, last year on the Mexican border and is now wearing the uniform of an infantryman of the Seventy-first New York. If he fights in the trenches as he did in the prize ring McCoy will set a lively pace for his comrades.

HEINIE GROH REJECTED.

Red Third Baseman Has Too Many Crooked Fingers For Army.

The idea that all ball players must be physically fit for service in the army appears to be erroneous. Heinie Groh, third baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, received orders several days ago to report for examination, and finally reported. He got away well in the physical test until one of the examiners noted that his fingers were not as straight as they should be.

At various times during his baseball career Groh had smashed his fingers in fielding batted or thrown balls, and they did not "come back." As a result Groh was "rejected" by the examining board. If the same rule is to be followed it means that several ball players who are otherwise physically fit will be rejected by the examining boards.

Betting on Games in Boston Will Be
Stamp Out by A. L. Head.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league, said that gambling would be stamped out in Boston; that if the club owners there were unable to handle the situation the league as a whole would take it up.

Johnson admitted that the riot during the Red Sox-White Sox game recently probably was started by gamblers who have been losing heavily since the champions' slump began. "Gambling never has been tolerated by our league," Johnson said. "There was an attempt to introduce it on a large scale in New York early this year, but we nullified the effort before it was well started. We will stop gambling at Boston; two, regardless of what measures are necessary."

Matty Coulter's See Cruise.

"One player who baffles all my dignities," Matt Coulter, "is Walter Cruise of the Cardinals. When he came into the league he played poor ball
and did not look like one of the makings of a big league athlete. Now he is there in every way, and I'll say that he is a grand ball player."

A man on the shady side of forty thought he was going into a decline.
He went to his physician, submitted to a thorough examination and waited the word which was to consign him to the scrap heap.

This is what the doctor, who happened to be a modern physician, told him
two or three days later:

"You eat too much, drink too much,
sit around too much and walk too little. I am going to put you on a rigid diet, and I want you to walk—walk—walk."

The man who thought he was going into a decline demurred at the doctor's suggestion of a rigid diet. The diet prescribed consisted of milk—only milk
—and the man who saw visions of the scrap heap loved his "milk," but he decided to follow the doctor's orders.

He stuck to the rigid diet.
And he made it a practice to walk
two miles to the office every morning, rain or shine. The ease with which he acquired a score for the street car after a week or two astonished him.

At the end of a week of dieting and walking, this man began to look like a life with different eyes. His work, which had been a burden, began to assume an attractive glow. At the end of two weeks, with a modified but still skinny diet, and more walking, he began to catch himself in the act of romping up the stairs instead of dragging himself up by main force. At the end of four weeks of this treatment, without taking a drop of medicine or a single pill, he felt as if ten years had rolled off his shoulders.

The average New York man who works at desk sits too much. If he does not drink too much. He sits around too much and walks altogether too little. And what is true of the average
New Yorker is true of the average American. Too much food, too much drink and too much sitting around are the unholy trinity of our national de-bilitation. We are becoming physically flabby and mentally drowsy. We are beginning to nod in the armchair.

Overindulgence has done its worst. It system of well pampering which Dr. John H. Quale of Cleveland calls "twentieth century laziness."

Most of these "twentieth century habits" have to do with the stomach. In some languages a piece of basic philosophy has been crystallized, like a fly in amber, in the homely phrase, "I have the heartache," when stomach ache is meant. That phrase is an unconscious recognition of the fact that the stomach
is the center of the human system.

The importance of the stomach has been recognized by the earliest lawgivers and thinkers of the human race. The dietary regulations of the law of Moses were a far-sighted attempt to make the food of a historic nation conform to the laws of nature. Legislation for peoples living under conditions similar to those under which the Jews lived. Mohammed, another of the world's great lawgivers, embodied in the Koran a good deal that he found in the Talmud on the subject of eating and drinking.

Moses put the children of Israel on a diet. Mohammed put the Arabs on a diet.

Business and professional America
ought to go on a diet and stay there for awhile.

Nature is the greatest of all physicians. Give nature a chance. Don't overload your stomach with too much food. Don't overwork your liver and your kidneys by too much drink, and sometimes very little drink is too much.

Nature is the watchman sitting at the gate. Nature is ready to be up and at the enemy of your life at the first sign of danger. Don't blind and gag the watchman. Give him a chance for his life and yours.

Eat less. Walk more. The results will astonish you.—New York Mail.

Spread the Meat Flavor.
Cold ham, chicken or other meat left over in quantities too small for use alone may be used advantageously by mixing with other foods. Here is a recipe for one way to use such meat.

Chop the meat fine and season it well. Mix in enough butter or other fat to make it "shape" well. Form into rolls about the size of a finger and wrap around each a thin piece of short dough made from a pint of flour, two tablespoons of baking powder, salt and milk enough to mix. Bake the rolls in a hot oven until they are a delicate brown. Serve hot.—New York World.

Depends on Circumstances.
"Do you believe in antihyponatism?"
"That depends on whether you own
one of the blamed things."—Baltimore

WHAT THE SECRETARY OF WAR SAYS:

"The War Department approves of their enterprise (that of those who take part in raising the 'Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund') and thanks them in behalf of many a household soldier and sailor who will be cheered not merely by the kindly gifts themselves, but still more by the spirit of cordial and homely sympathy which inspires them."

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

"EMPTY!"

"Gun Smoke Everywhere—

But not a whiff of TOBACCO SMOKE to cheer a fellow up!"

THE English "Tommies" have their pipes kept filled by the folks at home.
The French "Poilus" never want for a smoke—their friends are "on the job."
The "Anzacs" have all the tobacco they can use sent them by their loved ones.

And now the time has come for Americans to send little packages of happiness to our "Sammys" in the trenches and our "Jacksies" with the fleet. These lads are defending our lives and fortunes. We must show them our appreciation.

Besides facing the foe, our boys must experience homesickness, loneliness, dreary hours in the trenches, uncomfortable days in torpedo-boat destroyers. Tobacco cheers them; home and friends loom up in the fragrant puffs. Help us to give the boys at the front the "smokes" they crave and need. Even if you object to tobacco personally, think of those whom it comforts and let your contribution come without delay!

25c Keeps a Fighting Man Happy For a Week—$1 Sends a Month's Supply of Tobacco—ACT!

Each quarter buys a package of tobacco and cigarettes worth 45 cents, enough to make one of your defenders happy for a week. One dollar makes him and his trench mates glad for a month. Those who can afford it should adopt a soldier and keep him supplied with tobacco for the duration of the war. One dollar a month does it. Small and large contributions solicited.

A War Souvenir For You—A feature of this fund is that in each package is enclosed a post card addressed to the donor.

This Is a Volunteer Movement

The space for this advertisement is given free. The services of those who manage the fund are donated. Every cent collected goes into the purchase of tobacco comfort for our soldiers and sailors. Do your part!

Here is a sample of the letters of appreciation that come back to Canada and England from the lads who have been comforted. Our "Fund" will receive similar letters.

WEST KNOCKS*AT THE DOOR.

For First Time in Years the Teams
Show Real Pep.

Since the best days of the Chicago
Cubs, the famous old Pirates and the Tigers, who won an American league championship the west hasn't held such a prominent place in baseball as it now is holding it. The pep and dash of the Cardinals and Reds and the possibilities in the appointment of Fred McKinnis as manager of the Cubs are thrilling the westerners.

Indications are now that, even if they don't attain the top of the peak this year, the Reds and Cardinals should win a pennant—oh, hey, what a life it would be! St. Louis or Cincinnati!

"CONTRABAND"

A Romance of the North Atlantic

By RANDALL PARRISH

AUTHOR OF "THE LADY OF THE NORTH," "MAID OF THE FOREST," ETC.

"You must be free to act and plan. I cannot, nor any of those men confined in this ship. By winning McCann's confidence, by seeming to yield to his desires, you will be allowed freedom on board. You can demand it as the price of your surrender. All else must depend on your woman's wit."

"But—could I—convince the man of my sincerity? I—I detest him so."

"He will want to be convinced; you must not look at this from your standpoint. He is concerned and cowardly. To save his own life he would be guilty of any treacherous act. He will judge you by his standards. There will be no necessity for any pretense at love; you need not even permit him to touch you. Merely allow him to believe that fear makes you an unwilling victim."

"You actually wish me to do this—play this hideous part?"

"Only because of our desperate situation; we must fight with the only weapon at hand. There is no other course open. The one thing I have in mind is—someone on board free to release the prisoners immediately after the boats leave, in time to enable us to prevent the ship's going down."

"But—Mr. Hollis, would—would he not insist upon my going with him in the boat?"

"I walked twice across the narrow space of the deck, conscious that her questioning eyes followed me."

"Yes," I admitted, pausing to study her face. "You might even be obliged to do that. You must front this possibility, although the necessity may be avoided. But McCann's boat will make St. Johns. He dare not resort to force once you are ashore. I do not count that a serious danger—only the must in suspect your purpose until too late to prevent his interfering with your action. Nor will you be unsafe with him in the open boat, for the two of you will not be alone. Your greatest peril will be while aboard this ship, and completely in McCann's power."

"The open boat will not be long at sea."

"Not to exceed a few hours probably. Liverpool and White are seamen enough to see that it is equipped with a sail, and if the wind be favorable, they will make land quickly. But there is even a chance that you need not take this risk."

"What chance?" the full measure of her emotions finding evidence in her voice.

"If Leary or Olson could be secretly released, or even if you could be assured that I was free to attempt the deck at the proper moment, and thus able to release these others, we might best play a bold game. By urging some excuse you could delay leaving the ship until after all the mutineers were over the side, and in the boat. McCann might remain on board with you, but he would be only a man to handle. Once we had control of the ship, we could defeat the decks, and prevent these ruffians from returning on board, at least until they surrendered all arms, and agreed to such terms as we offered."

"That—that would be a most desperate expedient," she said dejectedly, "its success doubtful. You would be utterly outnumbered, and without weapons."

"I do not see it so. Outnumbered, yes; but with every advantage of position. Those fellows could not climb the side, unless it be one at a time. Besides, the major part of the crew are doubtless mutineers against their will, and would be glad enough to return to duty if promised protection on board. I have one of these, and McCann carries another. Really the plan looks feasible to me."

"She arose and crossed over to the open port, gazing out in silence at the waste of waters, the wind lifting strands of her ruffled hair. She remained there motionless so long I became impatient."

"Have you no answer to make?" I questioned at last. "You think the scheme impracticable?"

"No; it is not that," but without changing posture or glancing about, and I felt there was a deadness in her voice, far from encouraging. "But—I do not like the part assigned to me."

"You fear you might find it difficult to carry out the deceit?"

"She turned and faced me, and there were tears in her eyes, which she swept indignantly away with a swift gesture."

"You have used the right word," she exclaimed, no longer hesitating in speech. "I am not accustomed to deceit. Mr. Hollis, I have never learned how to lie, or conceal my true feelings. I am not afraid physically; it is not that; but you ask me to permit this fellow to make love to me, and I am to encourage his hopes, and pretend to yield to his advancements. You ask me to lower my womanhood, to take my place on a level with a girl of the streets, and pretend to sell myself for a price. Is this your conception of my character?"

"It was as though she had slapped me in the face, yet I was ready, half anticipating she might assume this position."

"No; but I believe you willing to sacrifice your conception of what ordinarily seems right to save this ship, and the lives of those aboard; to preserve Philip Bascom's fortune. There need be no love making, no pretense at love. You seemingly yield to force, surrender to fear; that would be, the only way in which McCann would expect to gain your consent."

"You wish me to do this?"

"It appears to me as our only hope."

"And if I do, you will not despise me? You will not feel my action unwomanly?"

"I feel that of you! Never; why, it would be impossible for me to conceive of your acting unwomanly!"

She held out her hand.

"Then I will try," she said simply, her eyes uplifted to mine.

CHAPTER XXII.

Words of Love.

My hand-clasp tightened, and the long lashes shaded her eyes, concealing from me the mystery of their depths, a brighter color flooding her cheeks. Outlined against the open port, and the blue of the water beyond, the fresh young beauty of her face was almost a new revelation. The words she had spoken, her manner, her sudden surrender to my wish, perplexed me, and completely overcame my effort at self-control.

"Why did you ask me that?" I questioned, scarcely aware of my words.

"What?"

"If I would despise you; would deem you not unwomanly?"

"Because—because I had to know. It does not even yet seem right to me—altogether. I—I could not do such a thing unless you approved."

"You have faith in me, then?"

"Yes—yes, I believe in you."

"And you mean you would have refused to take such action if I had not urged it upon you, and had failed to assure you that doing so would in no way lower my respect for you?"

Her eyes flashed up questioningly into my face, only to be instantly lowered again.

"Yes."

"Not even to save your own life?"

"I have always felt there were conditions more to be dreaded than death," she answered slowly. "More association, such as you describe this adventure to be, with Fergus McCann, may not be such a condition—yet I shrink from it. I have chosen my course, not because it may preserve my life, but for the sake of the others helpless on board this miserable vessel; because of the crippled man locked in his own cabin; because of the mother praying for him in Philadelphia. Oh! Mr. Hollis, can you not understand?"

"Vera, why do you question me like this? Why should you hesitate, doubt, when you realize, as you must, that only through you, and your power over McCann, Philip Bascom's life and fortune can be saved?"

"Because I would not save them at the cost of your respect."

"Mine! You think that of me?"

"Yes," she said, and now her eyes met mine frankly. "I think that of you, Robert Hollis."

This avowal, quietly, honestly spoken, sent the hot blood tingling through my veins, yet left me for the moment speechless. I could not, dare not, interrupt with details for it is better I should go on. But I am not a child; I think and feel as a woman; indeed, I have cause to believe that my life—lonely and without companion of my own age—has made me older in experience than my years. Why do I confess this? Because I believe the time has come when you should know. I am going to carry out your desire; I am going to rescue Fergus McCann, and overcome his villainy. I am going to lower myself; renounce my ideals, for your sake."

"Mine! Oh, no; you cannot mean that—there are others."

"Yes, there are others. I sympathize with, and am glad to serve them. Yet their fate alone—even my own peril—would never have led me to make this decision. I trust you, and am willing."

"You are, actually, care that must for me?"

"In there any disgrace, any unwomanliness in saying so? We are in desperate stress, all of us. Even death may be but a few hours away. This is no situation to be ruled by social conventions, or lack of frankness in speech. I do care for you, Robert Hollis; you would have known it long ago, if you were not blind in such things. You have cared for me ever since we were in the boat together. Is this not so?"

"Yes, but I never thought—"

"Of course not; you are not the sort of man who would. You have not made a life study of women; perhaps that is why I trust you so thoroughly. If—if you had made love to me, Robert Hollis, I would have laughed at you; but—but now I do not feel like laughing at all."

"You do love me! You—you love me!"

"Oh, you mustn't compel me to say that! It is enough to confess I care; that I am interested. If it was not for the desperate chance I am about to take, I should never have said these words. We simply must understand— you and I. I cannot go to Fergus McCann pretending to yield to his desires, to conform to his wishes, without you comprehend first of all that I do this not even to save my own life, but because I love you."

"You love me? You really love me?"

"As a woman never loved before, I believe," she answered gravely. "I love you."

I know not what time passed as I held her in my arms, and whispered these words repressed so long. Almost I forgot where we were, the nature of our surroundings, the fate which threatened us. I could remember only her, the velvety touch of her flesh, the welcoming light of love in her eyes. I knew not what we talked about, conscious only of the joy of being alone together, with every barrier between us swept away forever. The sunshine poured in through the open port, touching her hair with threads of golden light, and leaving a bar of brilliance across the state-room deck.

Yet I imagine the respite was not long. There came a sharp rap upon the wood of the door, and I instantly backed to the wall, and in position. Her arms released me, and I arose to my feet.

"What is wanted?"

"It's a few minutes till noon, sir," said a voice I failed to recognize. "And I'm to tell you to come on deck."

"Quite right, my man, I'll be there at once. Stand by to carry the instruments."

"Aye, aye, sir."

There was a certain cheerfulness and respect in the voice, which convinced me that the fellow was not among the ringleaders, but the hope of making him an adherent to our cause vanished when I opened the door, and recognized Dade. The man was too weak, too much of a jellyfish, to render his friendship of any particular value. Besides, he was also in the cabin, leaning fully against the stair-rail, but quite as evidently on guard. I nodded to him, but he only condescended to stare in return, and the look in his eyes convinced me that he had not yet forgiven the rough treatment accorded him a few hours before. The memory made me smile.

"I've seen you when you looked happier, Dugan," I said carelessly, "but I imagine you have nothing on Jim White."

"To—b—I with you," he growled savagely. "If I had my way I'd have my tongue left to get smart with. Get along now after yer things."

Dade followed me into the captain's stateroom. He was obedient enough, but reluctant to talk, no doubt afraid of being overheard by Dugan.

"I've seen you when you looked happier, Dugan," I said carelessly, "but I imagine you have nothing on Jim White."

The conspirators were grouped on the after deck waiting my arrival, and I followed Dade up the ladder, determined they should perceive no change in my demeanor, which might awaken suspicion. McCann's manner was far from cordial as I approached, but I thought it best to ignore his churlishness.

"You were long enough coming; perhaps you still think yourself in command," he said savagely.

"That would indeed be a stretch of the imagination," I replied, holding my temper, and nodding Dade where to place the sextant. "However, I do not think I have wasted my time—it is still two minutes of twelve."

He growled something, but I bused myself with the observation, only anxious to make it accurate enough for my own use. Whatever Dugan reported, it was absolutely necessary that I know myself the exact position of the ship. Nor did I dare to juggle them greatly in my report, for while McCann was far from being an expert navigator, he yet possessed a smattering of knowledge, which rendered him dangerous, and he was very sure to check up my figures with every care possible. However, I fooled him by a point or two, sufficient for my purpose.

He wrote down the result on the back of an old envelope, while standing away the correct figures in my own brain. Although the air was balmy enough, the wind from the southwest almost

smaller towns during the summer months."

"How far are we to the north of St. Johns?"

"Two hundred and fifty miles, approximately."

"Which makes us about due east of this White bay indicated here?"

"Yes; but there is not even the name of a town given; all that country is wilderness, I take it. Why do you ask? I thought you had decided on St. Johns?"

"So we have," in no pleasant tone, and crumpling up the chart in both hands, "but I thought if there was a more quiet port to the north it might be safer. There are apt to be warships at St. Johns. However, we will keep to that course." He turned to Liverpool.

"Quite right, my man, I'll be there at once. Stand by to carry the instruments."

"Aye, aye, sir."

There was a certain cheerfulness and respect in the voice, which convinced me that the fellow was not among the ringleaders, but the hope of making him an adherent to our cause vanished when I opened the door, and recognized Dade. The man was too weak, too much of a jellyfish, to render his friendship of any particular value. Besides, he was also in the cabin, leaning fully against the stair-rail, but quite as evidently on guard. I nodded to him, but he only condescended to stare in return, and the look in his eyes convinced me that he had not yet forgiven the rough treatment accorded him a few hours before. The memory made me smile.

"I've seen you when you looked happier, Dugan," I said carelessly, "but I imagine you have nothing on Jim White."

"To—b—I with you," he growled savagely. "If I had my way I'd have my tongue left to get smart with. Get along now after yer things."

Dade followed me into the captain's stateroom. He was obedient enough, but reluctant to talk, no doubt afraid of being overheard by Dugan.

"I've seen you when you looked happier, Dugan," I said carelessly, "but I imagine you have nothing on Jim White."

The conspirators were grouped on the after deck waiting my arrival, and I followed Dade up the ladder, determined they should perceive no change in my demeanor, which might awaken suspicion. McCann's manner was far from cordial as I approached, but I thought it best to ignore his churlishness.

"You were long enough coming; perhaps you still think yourself in command," he said savagely.

"That would indeed be a stretch of the imagination," I replied, holding my temper, and nodding Dade where to place the sextant. "However, I do not think I have wasted my time—it is still two minutes of twelve."

He growled something, but I bused myself with the observation, only anxious to make it accurate enough for my own use. Whatever Dugan reported, it was absolutely necessary that I know myself the exact position of the ship. Nor did I dare to juggle them greatly in my report, for while McCann was far from being an expert navigator, he yet possessed a smattering of knowledge, which rendered him dangerous, and he was very sure to check up my figures with every care possible. However, I fooled him by a point or two, sufficient for my purpose.

He wrote down the result on the back of an old envelope, while standing away the correct figures in my own brain. Although the air was balmy enough, the wind from the southwest almost

being alone together, with every barrier between us swept away forever. The sunshine poured in through the open port, touching her hair with threads of golden light, and leaving a bar of brilliance across the state-room deck.

Yet I imagine the respite was not long. There came a sharp rap upon the wood of the door, and I instantly backed to the wall, and in position. Her arms released me, and I arose to my feet.

"What is wanted?"

"It's a few minutes till noon, sir," said a voice I failed to recognize. "And I'm to tell you to come on deck."

"Quite right, my man, I'll be there at once. Stand by to carry the instruments."

"Aye, aye, sir."

I looked at the two of them, eager enough myself to make it a fight. Yet what was the use? Any excuse enabling him to confine me more closely would evidently be to his advantage.

I conquered myself, and hands clasped, crossed the deck space, and entered my stateroom, closing the door. I heard McCann laugh, and say something to Simms; then I knew he crossed the cabin, and went up the stairs. To better control myself I thrust my face out through the open port, breathing in the salty freshness of the air.

Suddenly I became aware that there had entered the main cabin. There was no sound of voices; nothing to tell me the purpose of this invasion, yet I felt certain that, at least, a dozen men had descended the steps from the companion. I stood erect listening; there was a thumping at my door. Had McCann changed his mind? Were they about to attack me in force? Revolver in hand, I took a step forward, half-ready to welcome any open hostility.

"The first look at to open that door," I called, "will get what's coming to him."

There was a mocking laugh in answer, in which more than one voice joined; then White growled reply: "No one is a' comin' in, mister; an' damn me, if you're not ter get out."

I grasped the knob, throwing my whole weight against the wood. It yielded scarcely half an inch, just enough to reveal a stout bar. This time I was a prisoner beyond doubt; they had left me no loophole of escape. But why? What had I done to warrant them in breaking their pledge? Could it be that McCann had no further use for me? No desire for another observation? If this was true, then it must be the men proposed deserting the ship that night, and making a chance of getting ashore in one of those northern bays. And they had called me in to tie like a rat in this hole, when the Indian Chief went down.

For the instant, as this fear gripped me, I was dazed and incapable of thought.

The main doubt assailing me had come from a dim suspicion aroused on the deck by McCann's questioning, and a shy glance exchanged between him and Liverpool. Were the fellows really contemplating making a landing elsewhere on the Newfoundland coast, instead of

HOME-READING COURSE FOR CITIZEN-SOLDIERS.

A Course of Thirty Daily Lessons Prepared for the Men Selected for Service in the National Army as a Practical Help in Getting Rightly Started in the Business of Soldiering, and Introductory to the Instruction That Will Be Given in the Training Camps.

LESSON NO. 15.

Fighting Arms of the Service.

We have spoken so far as if all soldiers were infantrymen, that is, as if all fought on foot armed with rifle and bayonet. As we all know, an army is much more complex. There are two other "fighting arms" of the service the Cavalry and the Artillery. These three branches of the Army are sometimes called the "line"—a term which comes down to us from the day when soldiers in battle were always drawn up in line. The other branches to be described later are included under the general term "Staff." However the Engineer Corps and the Signal Corps are in part troops of the line, though they are herein described for convenience under the heading of "Staff branches of the service."

The Infantry is the backbone of the Army. "It is the Infantry soldier who must bear the greatest stress of battle, and war is more dependent for success upon his individual action than upon any other factor." By far the largest number of men in the National Army will go into the Infantry branch of the service. In the present war the importance of Infantry is even greater than in previous wars.

The Value of Infantry.

It is not enough for Infantry to know how to defend itself. It must know also how to attack. It is not enough that it should be able to move forward in masses. The Infantry soldier must also have the intelligent self-reliance that will enable him to act as an individual, always, of course, within the limits of military discipline.

The chances for initiative in present day warfare can best be illustrated by recounting the story of Michael O'Leary, a lance corporal of the Irish Guards in the British Army. On February 1, 1915, the Guards were ordered to relieve a trench which had been temporarily lost to the Germans. O'Leary was off duty and need not have joined in the attack at all. But that did not stop him for a moment from using his courage and his brains to help his regiment win.

Jumping out of the trench he ran at full speed to a railroad cut on the right of the first German line where he was partly under cover from the enemy's fire. With five shots in succession he killed or disabled five men before his comrades reached the trench. Not satisfied with this achievement he ran ahead until he came up to the railroad cut beside the second German line. Here was a machine gun. The officer in command had just pointed the gun at the Irish Guards in the first trench and had his finger on the firing button when he was dropped by a well-aimed bullet from O'Leary's rifle. He shot two other Germans who were attempting to fire the machine gun, whereupon the remainder of the squad threw up their hands and surrendered.

Thus it happened that when his company of the Irish Guards reached the second line without the loss of a single man they were amazed to find O'Leary ahead of them in complete possession. He was made a sergeant on the field, and later given a Victoria cross. After other exhibitions of bravery and initiative, the 25-year-old soldier became Lieutenant O'Leary.

There is always an element of luck in such unusual achievements, but all the luck in the world is useless unless the soldier has developed his intelligence, spirit and self-reliance during his months of training.

The Cavalry.

The Cavalry is armed with saber and pistol as well as rifle. Since the early part of the present war there has been little opportunity to use Cavalry on the western front. For the most part the Cavalry forces of European armies have been fighting in the trenches as Infantry. Under these conditions it has been determined to reorganize several of the Cavalry regiments of our Regular Army as Field Artillery. United States Cavalry as such is not to be used in Europe at present. Some good judges believe that the Cavalry will again come into its own before the war is ended, but on this question no final opinion can now be given.

The Coast Artillery which handles the big-caliber guns guarding our chief harbors against naval attack is a branch distinct from the Field Artillery which handles the smaller guns drawn by horses or motor, and moved about with the rest of the Army. The present field guns range in size from 3-inch caliber to 4.7 inches. The Field Artillery also handles howitzers which throw heavy shells high into the air so that they will fall upon the target at a very steep angle.

The chief kinds of artillery ammunition are shrapnel and high explosives. The shrapnel is intended to burst in the face of the enemy and scatter a large number of bullets. The high explosives are used chiefly to blow up enemy trenches.

Increasing Importance of Artillery. The importance of artillery has been very much increased during the present war. It is the most effective of all weapons in preparing the way for attack. In advance of an attack on a large scale there are often several days of continuous artillery duel during which the big guns of both sides try to locate and put out of action the opposing guns. In fact, on the western front the artillery duel never entirely ceases.

The chief qualities of a good artilleryman are intelligence and tenacity. He must know his own gun so well

ARMY SUPPLY MOVEMENTS AND TRANSPORTS DIRECTED BY GENERAL F. J. KERNAN

GEN. FRANCIS J. KERNAN

A new division of the army general staff has been created to handle all business pertaining to the shipment of troops and supplies to Europe. Brigadier General Francis J. Kernan has been detailed as chief of the embarkation service with Colonel Chauncey B. Baker of the quartermaster corps as his chief assistant. These services will have direct supervision of all movements of supplies from points of origin to ports of embarkation and will control the movements of all army transports. All commercial shipping used for army purposes is also placed in General Kernan's jurisdiction.

that he can not only play his own part but, if necessary, can take the place of any of his comrades. He must have the courage that enables him to hold any position assigned to him until the order is given to move. Similar to the artillery in many respects are the machine-gun troops. Machine guns shoot out a steady stream of bullets and have great value against an attack from the front. They may also be readily carried forward by attacking troops and used with great effect against the defenders of a position.

A skirmish line cannot advance by walking or running when hostile machine guns have the correct range and are ready to fire. Machine-gun fire is not especially effective against troops lying on the ground or crawling. When opposed by machine gun without artillery to destroy them Infantry itself must silence them before it can advance. Concealment and patient waiting for critical moments and exceptional opportunities are the special characteristics of the machine gun service in decisive actions. (Infantry Drill Regulations, para 542, 545-548.)

In handling machine guns, just as in handling artillery, intelligence and tenacity are the qualities most needed. There are numerous examples in the present war of courageous self-reliance on the part of individual soldiers in repairing or serving machine guns while under fire and thus playing a big part in helping to win victories.

Marshwood Lady Would Thank Any One for Advice That Restores Health.

"I am a different woman since taking Tanlac," declared Mrs. J. Gaven, a highly respected lady of Marshwood near Scranton. "I suffered from stomach trouble. My stomach was so weak that nothing I ate agreed with me. I used to get spells of indigestion that took all the energy out of me and I would have to go to bed for a week at a time."

I would have splitting headaches and finally I felt like a nervous wreck. One of the worst experiences I had was the loss of sleep. The sleep I did get did not seem to rest me as it should because I went to bed Tanlac was worth many dollars to me. I am a different woman since taking it."

Just think I can get anything now without discomfort. I sleep sound throughout the entire night. I enjoy my meals with a relish. I recommend Tanlac because I believe in doing unto others as you would have others do unto you and I would thank any one that would recommend anything that would bring back health to any half sick or nervous run-down woman."

Tanlac is sold here at the Connellsville Drug Co.
Tanlac can also be secured in Dunbar at D. C. Eason's Drug Store—adv.
